

NEWSPAPERISM.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28, 1869.

The East River Bridge.

There are two or three subjects which periodically find before the contemplation of the New Yorker, and pin him to the conviction that he lives in a god-sent city, whose moneyed men will not passively allow any other metropolis to get in advance of it. One of the subjects—I will not say delusions—is the Hanson cab; another is the underground railway; another is the East River Bridge. Like the balls which the conjurer keeps in the air, these topics are continually being manipulated by parties whose interest it is to persuade editors constantly to keep the matter before the public. The least unpromising of all these projects is perhaps that of the East River Bridge. In spite of the opposition of the Union Ferry Company, the idea has begun to assume definite shape. The iron caisson upon which the foundation of the tower on the Brooklyn shore is to be laid, is already being contracted for; its cost is to be two hundred thousand dollars, and its weight three thousand tons. The foundation of yellow Georgia pine will weigh an additional eight thousand tons, and the caisson is to be sunk into the bed of the river to a depth of fifty-four feet below high-water mark. The Brooklyn terminus of the bridge is to be the upper slip of the Fulton Ferry, near the foot of Fulton street. By this means Chatham Square and Catharine street in this city will be brought into immediate connection with the principal business centres of Brooklyn, such as Myrtle avenue, Atlantic street, Fulton street, and Fulton avenue. Among the speedy good things anticipated for this prospective bridge is the completion of the caisson, ready for submergence, within the next two months. The timber foundation was the invention of the late Mr. Roebling. The work of dredging the river and installing the old docks is to be commenced at once, whereas the half-million people inhabitants of Brooklyn, and the million of New York (speaking in round numbers) greatly rejoice. An Anti-Mormon Fugitive from Salt Lake City, sweet seventeen in age, Scotch in lineage, and penniless in pocket, has just found friends enough to pay her passage back to Europe, in view of the story she tells of her escape from Mormonism, where she stood in danger of being forced into marriage with an uxorious sexagenarian. What astonished her there more than anything else was the asseveration of Brigham Young that the more a man was married the more he was saved, and that unless a man had seven or eight wives his damnation was certain. This and the solicitations of the sexagenarian so irritated her that she made her escape, though at great peril, from the city, threw herself upon the protection of some United States soldiers encamped near, and received sufficient contributions from them to pay her passage to Omaha. There she sold sufficient clothes to pay her passage to this city, where she was compassionated by Harbor Master Thompson. This gentleman laid her case before the court, and gave money, which was needed, and did not give advice (which could be dispensed with); and the young lady, whose name is Emily Kane, has gone back to Glasgow, where to describe how she came "Across the Continent" among the fastnesses—and loosenesses—of Mormonism. All that we certainly know about is that nothing whatever can certainly be known about him. The song And with which he treats bores; the utter disregard and indifference he manifests towards newspaper Bohemians; the unblushing temerity with which he orders beefsteak, when there is no possible excuse for his not ordering salmon or bluefish—these are about all the points which his bluffs of reticence and seclusion furnish for gossip to batten on.

Pere Hyacinthe

Barney Williams.

Mr. Barney Williams has been showing his handsome face and his neatly-fitting gloves at all the newspaper offices in Gotham where he has personal acquaintances and friends. His purpose in doing this has been to take solemn leave of them before departing for California and Australia. With all his merits, Barney cannot rest easy under the thought that Mr. Wheatley should be one or two hundred thousand better off than he; so, to ensure dying worth half a million, he is commencing the present tour. Mrs. Williams, who is the pink of coquetry and good sense, would gladly rest, but she has listened to Barney—I should say Barney—and taken up the burden of theatrical life again, saying sadly, "It might have been."

Settling a Bank Account

was illustrated yesterday morning at the Citizens' Savings Bank, at the corner of Canal street and the Bowery. Of that bank Mr. Charles W. Held is the paying-teller, and Mr. James Lillias one of the bank depositors. Mr. Lillias went to the bank, said that he had lost his bank book, but wanted to draw his money. Mr. Held informed him that it would first be necessary to advertise the loss. The depositor did so, and immediately returned to the bank, again demanding his money. The teller then informed him that he must make an affidavit of his loss, and get a new book before he could draw the money due him. This statement appeared quite to blind the intellectual and moral faculties of Mr. Lillias; for, although he left the bank at the time he had the money in his pocket, he demanded his money in a loud voice and excited manner, and Mr. Held could answer him, drew a four-barreled pistol from his pocket and shot at that gentleman twice. The shots fortunately missed Mr. Held, but without pausing to see whether they had or not, the frantic Lillias leaped over the counter and the glass screen which surrounded it—seven feet high in all—added inside, where he was grabbed by Mr. Lillias, the Receiving Teller, Mr. Held, meanwhile making for the window, not knowing how many more shots the seemingly inexhaustible pistol might contain. A police officer meanwhile was called in, and Mr. Lillias, far from settling his bank account, was indignantly hauled to the Tombs, where Justice Dowling settled him.

Overhauled at Last.

The last vestiges, that is, of the New York Hospital, which used to stand overlooking Broadway, immediately opposite to Pearl street. That long, wide, gently-sloping lawn, always smooth-shaven and green; those tall, majestic trees; the dingy, climbing ivy spreading over the greater portion of the walls of the old grey edifice—all these have passed away, to give place to two iron structures, stores, facing one another, and opening between them a continuation of Thomas street. New York Hospital, which has been open since the first of the century, has been a monument of the most picturesque episodes in the long brick-and-mortar history of Broadway. We have two few such breathing spots to be able lightly to part with any. But trade and commerce are perfectly relentless.

less. Bowling Green, the graveyards surrounding Trinity Church and St. Paul's, the little that remains to us of City Hall Park, Union Square, and Madison Square, are about the only green spots that now remain along the Broadway route.

But then, with all this, the demolition of the hospital scores to the city advantages which it could not otherwise enjoy. It will lead, for instance, to the purification and rehabilitation of Thomas street, one of the filthiest of all filthy streets in the lower part of the city. It will speedily be reared above the mud which impels itself there, and where the slum has hitherto asserted itself, the palatial warehouses will lift its front. There is a class of streets which, like wicketed men, only wear an opening provided for them to mend their ways and come out all right. Thomas street is one of these. The destruction of the hospital has given us a chance, of which I doubt not it will show itself worthy.

Mr. Fechter.

Mr. Fechter has "spotted a good mind" so many times with regard to coming to Philadelphia, that prospective audiences here are almost prepared to be impatient with him in advance, and Messrs. Jarrett and Palmer, those money-making gentlemen who some months ago larged for a season from him, are disposed to regret having ever had it in serious contemplation. It is not every actor from abroad who has the opportunity of having favorably spoken of by one of the first writers of the age, and in a magazine which does not scruple to obtain vast notoriety by publishing shameful scandals. Mr. Dickens in the Atlantic did for Mr. Fechter, in a large way, what Miss Dickinson, "pre-eminent for her own line," did for Miss Letitia, whom she "loves." In a recent letter. But it appears that even this has not satisfied the fastidious French-English gentleman. The "true story" of Mr. Fechter's home-appearance in this country is not so much the enormity of his demands in regard to salary as his arbitrary requirements in regard to the selection of his support and other star privileges. Messrs. Jarrett and Palmer, as a rule, two of the most reasonable men in the world in the terms they make and the privileges they concede, but the exactions of the blonde-haired "dandy" whom Mr. Dickens admires so much were too stringent even for them. So at present it remains uncertain whether Mr. Fechter will remain where he is or drift hither, as he has so often allowed to be announced. A "Hazel" with yellow hair would not quite so much of a novelty upon the American stage as he and his friends may think. Of late years it has been an affectation of Mr. Edwin Adams. In New York, and I think I may say in Philadelphia, Mr. Booth remains the ideal "dandy" of the period.

A Non-Advertising Medium.

There is a class of professional test-medians, who never advertise, from some dim sort of conviction, perhaps, that there is something of the same sort of discredit attaching to their business which is cast upon that of the quack and the mountebank. Mr. Charles Foster, the mellow-voiced, beaming, and rosy-visaged spiritual test-medium of West Fourth street, in this city, is one of this class of gifted mortals. Curious and interesting as his sanguinary calligraphy is—for he proves the immortality of the soul by producing on his arm red scrawls presumed to be autographs of spirit-friends—the very rarely blazes it forth in the newspapers, but relies entirely upon the reputation which gossip gives him, and the gratuitous printer's-ink lavished upon him by too credulous quill-writers and "ghost"-paper correspondents. Very often his communications commence thus—"Anybody here had a relative in a cancer? Anybody here got a grand-mother named Betsy Jane in the angel-world? Yes; the lady in green. Well, ma'am, your grand-mother says she is very happy to see you on this side of the water. You know I am across the table. She will also show her name on my arm," and rolling up a lovely white sleeve, the medium displays an arm of pellucid dazzlingness. (I think that will do), on which, in blood-red sinuosities, as described a name, which looks as Horace Greely's would look after being shaken up for six months in a kaleidoscope. On the other side of the arm, and of the sublime—and the "angel-world" is as sublime as though obscured by all its sources. Yet Mr. Foster is an excellent clairvoyant, a poly-companist, and not only makes money but saves it.

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

The City Amusements.

AT THE CHESTNUT the last nights of Hunted Down are announced, and it will be withdrawn after Saturday evening to allow of the production of other novelties that have been for some time in preparation. On Monday Tom Taylor's comedy of An Unequal Yoke will be given. Miss Keene also announces a new play entitled Bella and Victorien Sardou's Patric. On Wednesday Mr. Booth will appear this evening as "Claude Melnotte" in The Lady of Lyons. On Saturday night will be produced a new romantic drama entitled Time and the Hour, and on Monday Miss Lucile Western will appear in East Lynne. Boucicault and Byron's new drama of Lost at Sea is announced as in preparation. AT THE ARCH All That Ends Well will be repeated this evening. DUPREZ & BENEDETTI'S OPERA HOUSE, Seventh street, below Arch, has made a first-rate program, which brings out the talent of the troupe, they have hit the fancy of the public, and crowded their pretty little theatre every night since their opening. AT THE ELEVENTH STREET OPERA HOUSE an entertaining minstrel performance will be given this evening.

MAPLE CARLOTTA PATTI

will appear, under the auspices of Max Strakosch, Esq., in two grand concerts at the Academy of Music to-morrow and on Saturday evening. Madlle Patti is undoubtedly one of the first singers of the day, and all accounts say she more than fulfills the promise she gave when she first appeared here. She will be assisted at these entertainments by such eminent artists as Signor Ronconi, Joseph Hermanns, Theodore Ritter, and J. F. Prime. Seats can now be secured at Trumpler's. HERMANN'S, the great prestidigitator, will appear every evening next week at the Academy of Music, and he will introduce a great number of new and startling tricks. Some of them are perfectly inexplicable, and are far more startling than any of the mysterious performances of the Davenport Brothers and others who pretend to work by spiritual agency. The sale of seats for Hermann's entertainments will commence on Saturday at Trumpler's. PROFESSOR JAMES McCLINTOCK will commence a series of his popular lectures on anatomy, physiology, and hygiene at Concert Hall on Monday evening next. These lectures continue through the week, and they will be illustrated with the oxyhydrogen light, French mannikins, etc.; and they will undoubtedly be both useful and entertaining. MR. CARL WOLFSOHN has announced his program for his series of matinees this season. Some novel features will be introduced, calculated to render these entertainments more attractive than ever. Each matinee will be devoted to the interpretation of the works of a single master, which will enable the characteristics of the genius of the different composers to be set forth in a way never attempted before. Many compositions will be given in this city for the first time. Mr. Wolfssohn will be assisted by Messrs. Kopka, Hennig, and Baril, and he will introduce to the public a new tenor, Ferdinand, who is said to have a voice of remarkable sweetness. The first matinee will be given on Friday, November 19, and will be devoted to the interpretation of Beethoven's works.

THE PONEYVILLE LECTURES.

Mr. William L. Dennis, of this city, has achieved a considerable reputation as a humorist, and his lectures have always been much enjoyed. He has appeared to seldom in Philadelphia for the public to become so well acquainted as they ought with his merits, and we therefore take pleasure in announcing that he will give a series of entertainments at the Assembly Buildings under the title of "The Poneyville Lectures." The first lecture will be delivered on Tuesday evening next, and will be entitled "Dr. Dips of Poneyville." Mr. Dennis discoursed upon this theme last winter at Dr. Talmage's church, and the large audience in attendance was delighted with his wit and humor. The second lecture of the series will be "Our Church and Congregation at Poneyville." The third, "Widow's and her party at Poneyville," and the fourth, "The Social Fossils at Poneyville."

CITY ITEMS.

FALL OVERCOATS.—A fine assortment of these useful and useful garments, better in fit and style than any others ready-made in Philadelphia, is now on hand at the store of the Receiving Teller, Mr. Held, meanwhile making for the window, not knowing how many more shots the seemingly inexhaustible pistol might contain. A police officer meanwhile was called in, and Mr. Lillias, far from settling his bank account, was indignantly hauled to the Tombs, where Justice Dowling settled him.

GROVER & BAKER'S Highest Premium Sewing Machines

No. 730 Chestnut street. GET THE BEST.—The Parham New Family LOCK-STITCH SEWING MACHINE. (Easy Terms.) Salesroom, No. 704 CHESTNUT Street. JEWELRY.—Mr. William W. Cassidy, No. 12 South Second street, has the largest and most attractive assortment of the jewelry and silversware in the city. Purchasers can rely upon obtaining a real, pure article, furnished at a price which cannot be equalled. He also has a large stock of American Western Watches in all varieties and at all prices. A visit to his store is sure to result in pleasure and profit.

ADDITIONAL NOTICE.—Housekeepers will find on the Catalogue of Birch & Son's Sale Tomorrow Morning, every variety of Household Goods. Also, stock from a Chestnut street store of elegant Window Curtains, Lace Curtains, Sails, Brocade, Cloth Embroidered Piano Covers, Window Shades, etc.

SELF ADVERTISED.—FRANCO'S VITRINA ON SALVATION

for the hair carries with it its own best advertisement. As the light shines through the bottle you see that the liquid is clear as the purest of waters. You smell it and find the odor agreeable. You apply it and it changes gray hair to any natural shade without soiling the scalp or producing headache. Nothing can be more harmless.

CHARLES STOKER,

Merchant Tailor and Clothier, No. 824 Chestnut street, offers extraordinary inducements to Purchasers of Ready-made FINE CLOTHING.

His assortment is full, and comprises all styles and qualities.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.—WILSON'S OIL LIVER OIL AND LIME has now been before the public for ten years, and has steadily grown into favor and appreciation. This could not be the case unless the preparation was of undoubted and high intrinsic value. The combination of the Phosphate of Lime with pure Cod Liver Oil, as prepared by Dr. Wilson, has produced a new phase in the treatment of Consumption and all diseases of the Lungs. This article can be taken by the most delicate invalid without creating the disagreeable nausea which is such a prominent objection to the Cod Liver Oil when taken without the Phosphate of Lime. It is prescribed by the regular faculty, and sold by the proprietor, wholesale and retail, at No. 106 Court street, Boston, and by druggists generally.

THE GREAT POPULAR CLOTHING HOUSE

THE TRICK OF TRADE EXPOSED. It has been a plan of certain small houses in the Furniture trade to give 5 or even 10 per cent. commission to parties from either trades and stores bringing or sending customers to them, and then charging the purchaser for their services, or else sending them an inferior article. This is to caution parties not to go to stores where they are thus solicited by those interested advisors. Messrs. Gould & Co. do not pay any commission to carpet stores, or any others, and can therefore afford to sell cheaper, and give their customers the full benefit of this saving. They have by honorable dealing secured the largest Furniture Trade in the city, and hope to merit its continuance.
